TUESDAY, JUNE 12. 1739.

To RALPH FREEMAN, Esq;

SIR,

THERE is a new Doctrine which hath been lately propogated among the State Quacks, and which some of the most considerable Quondum Brethren in the Opposition have lately carried into Execution, that I cannot for the Life of me know how to reconcile; it is for all the World like a Party of Soldiers promising themselves Victory, by quitting the Field, and running away from their Colours, and seems quite inconsistent both with the Courage and Integrity of the Party, who have always declared themselves so very zealous for the Cause, and for which, upon some Occasions, they have been heard to say, they were ever ready to lay down both their Lives and Fortunes. There are some indeed who will have this to be no more than a prudential Retreat, and tell us, that in the Event it will be found that they acted right, and that they wanted not upon this Occasion either Courage or Conduct; that by and by they will be seen to rally and make Head again; and that the chief Reasons why they left their Ground, was only for a more commodious Situation, and to encamp themselves to greater Advantage. It must be confess'd, indeed, to carry on the Metaphor, that their Troops had been terribly harrass'd; their Centre quite broke in upon and disconcerted, and their Right Wing cursedly maul'd; and that they made so terrible a Fire upon the last Opposition, that they had quite spent all their Powder and Shot; so that both in Prudence, and for their Safety, they were obliged to retreat thus abruptly. For, as the Sage Hudibras has it;

He that fights and runs away,
May live to fight another Day.

THE next Campaign will open (as we are told) more to their Advantage; they are soliciting, I am credibly informed, as well for Instruction as for some Auxilliaries from Abroad, and are beating up through the Districts of Grub street for new Recruits, to supply a Draught of Invalids, which have been remov'd from a Party of Observation call'd the Ox-cheek Club; and for these their Amanuenses are imploy'd Day and Night in making out Dispatches. In the mean while the Veterans are gone into Winter-Quarters, and have been billotted out so advantagiously about the Country, by their respective Serjeants, that they cannot fail of a very considerable Supply the next Season, from the Country Fellows in their several Neighbourhoods as they suppose; whose Sweethearts they have express Orders to keep well with, and from whom in due Time, it is to be hoped, a new Generation of Patriots may arise equal even to those of the present. I cannot however foresee the Policy of these Commanders, who in the mean while give out, That they will still keep their Commissions, but act no farther; nor what Kind of Dependance their Principles can have on them, who thus positively declare themselves for a State of Inaction: To stand up boldly and resolutely for the Truth, and to fight through thick and thin in the Support and Defence of it, were the most remarkable Qualities by which Heroes of old were usually distinguish'd; but I never heard before now, that the deserting of a Cause could ever be reckon'd as a Proof of a Persons being more strongly attach'd to it. The ever memorable Winstanly was a Patriot of quite another turn; rather than fly the Battle, he chose to fall in it; and even after the Loss of his Legs (as the Historian informs us) he continu'd valiantly to fight, even upon his Stumps. True Courage is never to be intimidated by Numbers we are every-where acquainted; and I would leave it to the Consideration of these half-bred Heroes what a very poor Figure Don Quixote, or the less eminent Amadis de Gaul would have made in the same or the like Circumstances. With what Assurance can they look their Constituents in the Face I would fain know, and in what Language will they endeavour to palliate and gloss over so apparent and iniquitous a false Step; sure, a grave Face, and a few insignificant Shrugs, will never do the Business; and he must be extremely short-sighted indeed who cannot look through so very superficial and evasive an Excuse. It is so familiar a Question, that it cannot help being ask'd them, What could induce them, upon so very important a Crisis, not to stand their Ground, at a Time when, as they themselves declar'd, every thing was running into Ruin, and their All was at Stake. When Corruption was flowing in like a Deluge upon us, and Iniquity of every Kind rid rampant, abruptly to desert the Service in such a particular Time of Danger and Distress, is, I think, very difficult to be accounted for; and he must be very well warm'd with Prejudice and March Beer, who can, upon such an Occasion, impute it to any thing less than Cowardice or Desperation. There is indeed a sceptical Side to be taken of every Question; but he must be a great Master in Sophistry, who, under so remarkable a Dilemma, can think of bringing himself off. Where Men's Words and Actions are seen manifestly to disagree and contradict each other, the World must soon see through the Fallacy, and can no longer be deluded and led blindfold, Pique and private Views will break forth and discover themselves, and Publick Spirit appear a mere Cant Term, which they have assum'd only the better and more effectually to deceive; Mankind will see their real Interest, and return to their Senses, and conclude that those Men who left them in so imminent a Time of Danger, are by no means any longer to be trusted, or depended upon. Whoever hath a Point to carry, his great Care should, in the first Place, be to appear consistent; and no Kind of Imposture can be long supported, whose Principle and Practice is not somewhat of a-piece. Alas! the unhappy forlorn State of modern Patriotism! They seem to be so long from School as to have forgot their first Rudiments, and to be so unfortunately out of their Road as not to remember from whence they set out. I could wish they would look back to the Creed they began with, and recall to their Minds the great Promises and Vows they so zealously made at their Time of Conversion. For Shame, for Shame, Gentlemen! do not sneak off in this Manner; either face about and defend yourselves, or lay down your Arms and crave Quarter; declare yourselves one Way or another, I beseech you, and do not longer remain in this unhappy State of Incertitude. You have generous Adversaries to deal with, and from whom you may expect fair Play; if you still retain the same Principles as of old, return to your Post, and acquit yourselves like Men, or at once abondon a Cause, that you seem rather to be asham'd of; and remember that it is much more generous to give up an Error, than wilfully and stubbornly to persist in and abide by it. It is impossible to say how much you may find your Account in doing this, and how many good and comfortable Effects may arise and flow from a sincere and unfeign'd Contrition. Hearken to my Instructions, my dear Patients, and do not take it amiss, that I go about thus tenderly and cordially to advise you; your Cases are not so bad, but that you may still hope for Recovery; nor your Constitutions so far gone, and desperately emaciated, but that by entering upon a new Regimen, and taking it in Time, you may yet be restored to your former Health: Get but out of the Hands of these Quacks, who have so misled you, and for the Sake of yourselves, and your Posterity, come over to the safe and salutary Prescriptions of the College: If we can but once take that Load off your Stomach under which you at present Labour, and purge away that Heap of malignant Phlegm and Choler with which you so much abound, my Life to yours you will do well again. Sir, be pleased to publish this Prescription in your next, and you will continue to oblige

Your, and the Publick's affectionate Friend,
and obedient humble Servant,
RAYMUND LULLY.

Yesterday arrived a Mail from Holland.

LETTERS of the 14th ult. O. S. from Hungary say, that the Germans have form'd three Camps in a pleasant plentiful Country, so situate, that they may assemble all together in a very short Space of Time, which will be done immediately after the Arrival of the Bavarian and other Troops that are soon expected. These Camps have Peterwaradin in the Centre, (near which Prince Eugene of Savoy beat the Turks in 1716.) where the Veldt Marshal de Wallis has fixed his head Quarters. The first of these Camps extends to the very Gates of the Fortress, and consists of 30 Battalions; the second is pitch'd on the North Side of the Danube, about a League below Peterwaradin, and consists of 3 Regiments of Cuirassiers, under the Command of Lieutenant General Count de St. Ignon; and the third lies two Leagues further off on the same Side of the Danube, over-against the famous Town of Carlowitz, which consists of five Battalions, under the Lieutenant General Count de Daun, together with two Regiments of Dragoons, and two of Cuirassiers. Besides these, there are three Regiments of Dragoons, one of Cuirassiers, and another of Hussars, encamp'd upon the River Teisse, which falls into the Danube four Leagues from Peterwaradin. The Velt Marshal de Neuperg commands also a separate Body, consisting of four Regiments of Cuirassiers, one of Dragoons, two Regiments of Hussars, and some Battalions, near Arrad upon the River of Maros, in the Bannate of Temeswaer: And two Regiments of Cuirassiers lye encamp'd between Temeswaer and Segedin, to secure the Communication between those two Fortresses.

Mean time, it is certain, according to all Advices from Constantinople, that not only the new Grand Vizier, but the Turks in general, are very much in earnest for a Peace, which is chiefly ascrib'd to the few good Troops they have on Foot, to the Disorders in Asia, and especially to the Menaces from Persia.

Letters of the 26th ult. O. S. from Vienna say, that the Plenipotentiaries of Russia and Poland met on the 15th at the House of the French Ambassador, and sign'd the Accession of their Courts to the Definitive Treaty for a General Peace between the Emperor and France.

Those of the 1st of June from Hamburgh advise, That the Court of Sweden has sent positive Orders to all their Officers to repair immediately to their Regiments, and that a numerous Squadron is equipping at Carelscroon, which they add is to take on Board several Regiments that are filing towards that Port; but for what Design is not said.

Letters from Venice say, they have a Confirmation of the great Earthquake which has happen'd at Smyrna, by which near One-Half of the Town was ruin'd, so that the Inhabitants were oblig'd to retire under Tents in the Fields. They add, that the Plague also makes great Ravages in those Parts.

They write from Brussels, That the Princess de la Tour and Taxis, who was of the Family of Brandebourg-Bareith, dy'd there on the 2d Instant, in the 28th Year of her Age, very much lamented by Reason of her excellent Qualities

We here that General Diemar is set out from Vienna for Stockholm, to be General in Chief of the Cavalry of the Landgrave of Hesse Cassel; but that he still keeps the Regiment of Cuirassiers in the Emperor's Service.

The Chevalier de St. George and his two Sons are only gone from Rome to pass the Summer at Albano.

IRELAND.

Dublin, June 5 On Sunday last, in the Afternoon, a Mob of near two thousand having assembled at the Back of Usher's Quay, George Ribton, Esq; one of our Sheriffs, being acquainted with it, and applied to to disperse them, he went to the Barracks, and desir'd the Picquet Guard to his Assistance. As soon as the Guards came, the Mob retreated to an Eminence, threw their Hats in the Air, huzza'd, and were preparing to assault the Guards, but took care to secure a Retreat, which the Sheriff perceiving, order'd twenty of the Guards to march up Twatling-street, to stop the Retreat, and the other Twenty to the Front; but the Mob perceiving it, made off with great Precipitation, and only three were taken.

It is hop'd, by the Care and Vigilance of the Magistrates, all such riotous Assemblies will be suppressed.
